

One page for the fridge

A place to write the agreement your household chooses to try.

Write only what everyone involved is comfortable displaying. Keep personal answers and private concerns in your own report.

One way is to look, once, for something slow made for children this small, and write its name where the house can see it; what repeats each week is putting it on, not the looking. It costs a lunch break spent in a menu.

This is about what is on, not about how long, and it is not a promise about your child's words.

Not for everyone: not for the day when an older child's programme is the only one the house can agree on. Whatever keeps a small child safe and busy while you earn or cook is its own good reason.

WHAT WE HAVE AGREED TO TRY

WHEN AND WHERE

WHAT EACH ADULT WILL DO

WHEN WE WILL TALK ABOUT HOW IT WENT

An agreement can be changed if it does not fit your family. Keep the full plan and its limitations for your own reference.
